SOFT DRINKS

SEEDLIP SPICE 94 £2.50 (NON-ALCOHOLIC SPIRIT)

This non-alcoholic spirit alternative from Seedlip is one of the most innovative products we've seen for a long time. It's made like a gin with botanicals, but is definitely not a gin. The predominant flavour is clove rather than juniper, and, most importantly, it has no alcohol! Perfect if you're a designated driver or you're not drinking at the moment.

Creator Ben Branson was bored of sweet, fizzy drinks, and he combined six botanicals to make Seedlip: allspice, grapefruit, lemon peel, cardamom, American oak and cascarilla bark. Together, they make a fresh, warming drink that is full of flavour but is alcohol free.

SEEDLIP GARDEN 108 £2.30 (NON-ALCOHOLIC SPIRIT)

Creator Ben Branson won't say exactly how he makes Garden 108, but he has revealed that he uses a combination of distillates: hay, pea, spearmint, rosemary, thyme and hop. The result is a flavour-packed drink perfect for summer sipping. It's also sugar- and calorie-free.

WHISKY

Although made from very simple materials – malted barley, water and yeast – the make of each distillery has an individual character, owing to a variety of factors, such as the length of fermentation time, the style and size of the stills, and how they are operated, the type of condensers used and amount of spirit saved (called ‘the cut’). Since at least the 1880s, blenders have identified different styles of whisky coming from different parts of Scotland.

The original division, dating from the 1780s, was between ‘Lowland’ whisky and ‘Highland’ whisky. Then the whiskies made in Campbeltown and Islay were discerned to be different, and the whiskies of Speyside were added to the list. With the dramatic growth of interest in single malt whiskies since the 1980s, the ‘Highland’ region has been sub-divided into Northern, Western, Eastern, Southern and Islands.

CAMPBELTOWN SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

Campbeltown was once a thriving malt whisky region of no fewer than 34 distilleries – no mean feat for a small and remote settlement at the bottom of the long Kintyre peninsula. Now only three producers remain, but they make up for their paucity by producing five distinctive malt whiskies between them.

HIGHLAND SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

Scotland’s largest whisky region boasts a dizzying array of styles, from rich and textured to fragrantly floral, as befits an ever-changing landscape of coastline, moor and mountain. Even without the famed Speyside enclave, you’ll find some of whisky’s most famous names here – and some of its most fiercely individual spirits.

ISLAND SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

There are nearly 800 islands scattered off Scotland’s crenelated coastline, of which only a few are inhabited – and fewer still have a distillery. Excluding the whisky hotspot of Islay, the islands of Arran, Mull, Jura, Skye, Lewis and Orkney are home to an eclectic mix of styles, from light citrus to full-on peat smoke.

ISLAY SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

The southernmost of its island chain, Islay is known as ‘The Queen of the Hebrides’ – and is certainly the reigning monarch of a typically smoky, peaty style of single malt whisky. But there’s much more to this beating heart of distillation, which has eight active producers – and more to come.

LOWLAND SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

There’s more distillation in the Lowlands than any other Scottish region, but its days as a significant single malt player are consigned to history. This is the home of the blend, and of the large quantities of grain whisky which form its foundation – but a few producers keep up the trademark light and grassy Lowland malt style.

SPEYSIDE SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

Broadly speaking, Speyside whiskies can be classified as falling into one of two camps. At one end of the spectrum there are the light, grassy, ‘lunchtime whiskies’ such as Glenlivet; at the other end lie the rich, sweet, sherried qualities of Glenrothes and Macallan.

JAPANESE WHISKY

If the finer points of Japanese culture can prove elusive to the Western psyche, much the same could be said for the country’s whisky. While there may be echoes of Scotland in the distilleries of Honshu and Hokkaido, the huge variety of production techniques produces multifaceted whiskies with an identity all their own.
